

"Bringing Order to the Chaos" or the Scourge of San Andreas?

By Juniper Jones

SecuroServ, a name and uniform that has become infamous among patrons of The Mall as assholes, bullies, and abusers. Even the walls have something to say, with threatening graffiti popping up on every surface this week saying "SecuroServ Sucks. SecuroServ slapped my dog. SecuroServ you're done for." I spoke with multiple employees of SecuroServ, as well as regular patrons of the mall, in order to get the full story.

As a disgruntled ex-SecuroServ employee, Kareem Saint had a lot to tell me about his experience with the company. With red spray paint dusting his gloves and jacket, he lobbied everything from awful pay, lack of training, favoritism, and animal cruelty against the organization.

A current SecuroServ employee, Vanessa Vandeer, gave me an idea of what their agents experience every day. Explosions, shootings, and murders are her daily alarm clock, yet Vandeer is relentless in her pursuit of order. "You have to be active in bringing order to the chaos." She told me, explaining why she stays in this line of work. Her drive inspires hope in this reporter for a more orderly hub of commerce, but not everyone has seen this side of SecuroServ.

When interviewing other patrons about their experiences with the company, it was rare to find someone who didn't have something negative to say. One man summed it up when he said he sees SecuroServ as "bullies that prey on weaker people," using their position of authority to play into their personal power fantasies. Clearly, public perceptions of the security-for-hire are tanking, and there seems to be very little movement in their favor.

SecuroServ has taken steps to address civilian concerns. Firstly, and most importantly, they've fired problem-employees such as Kareem Saint. Many of the instances of bullying and abuse I heard from guests could be traced back to his record, which also includes multiple arrests, escalations of violence, and elder abuse. Other agents like Vandeer are actively working to improve their reputation by handing out sack lunches to guests affected by the chaos.

It can take a lot to fix a bad reputation, and SecuroServ has its work cut out for it, but agents like Vandeer do their part to fix it. I urge our readers to continue holding authority figures accountable for their actions while giving them a little credit for the work they do for us. To quote Vandeer, "If everyone sees [SecuroServ] as bullies, it gives the people who want to hurt [others] an excuse to hurt them more."

THIS WEEK

The State of the Police
SASP & DoJ heads address public allegations at first formal press conference.
► More on Page 2 >>

Where There's Dragons, There's Fire
Opening night curse continues for businesses; with multiple explosions at Dragon's debut.

“WHERE LEGENDS COME TO LIFE”

Visit @Dragon Entertainment on LifeInvader or call 555-1480 or 555-8194 for more information.

